Trinidad, Colo., is said to be attracting the attention of some of the leading glass manufacturerers of the Pittsburg, Wheeling and other glass manufacturing centers in the more eastern states. They have an immense deposit of finest sand and silicia, tegether with an abundance of all the facilities needed for the production and marketing of the goods, including the great railroad systems of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and Union Pacific, and other systems for transporting goods to market in every direction. In addition to these raw materials, Trinidad, being the greatest coal producing point west of the Mississippi river, supplies both coal and coke to manufacturers at a triling cost.
